Anti-Racism: Learning to Confront the Uncomfortable

This training will help us better understand racism by examining its foundation and challenging common misunderstandings. It's a chance for us to reflect on what we know and what we think we know, using a critical social justice framework. Building an anti-racist society begins within ourselves and is an on-going journey of unlearning, bravery, and empathy. We hope participants will leave this session feeling more comfortable with the uncomfortable and have a clearer understanding of terms and ideas that are commonly used in conversations about race and racism.

This training is presented by the John Humphrey Centre for Peace and Human Rights (JHC). JHC develops and delivers education and training to support communities, organizations, and individuals to embed human rights, build equity and address discrimination.
